Download your data

Click Export in the top bar. You get the same files as the Exporter extension, in the same structure.

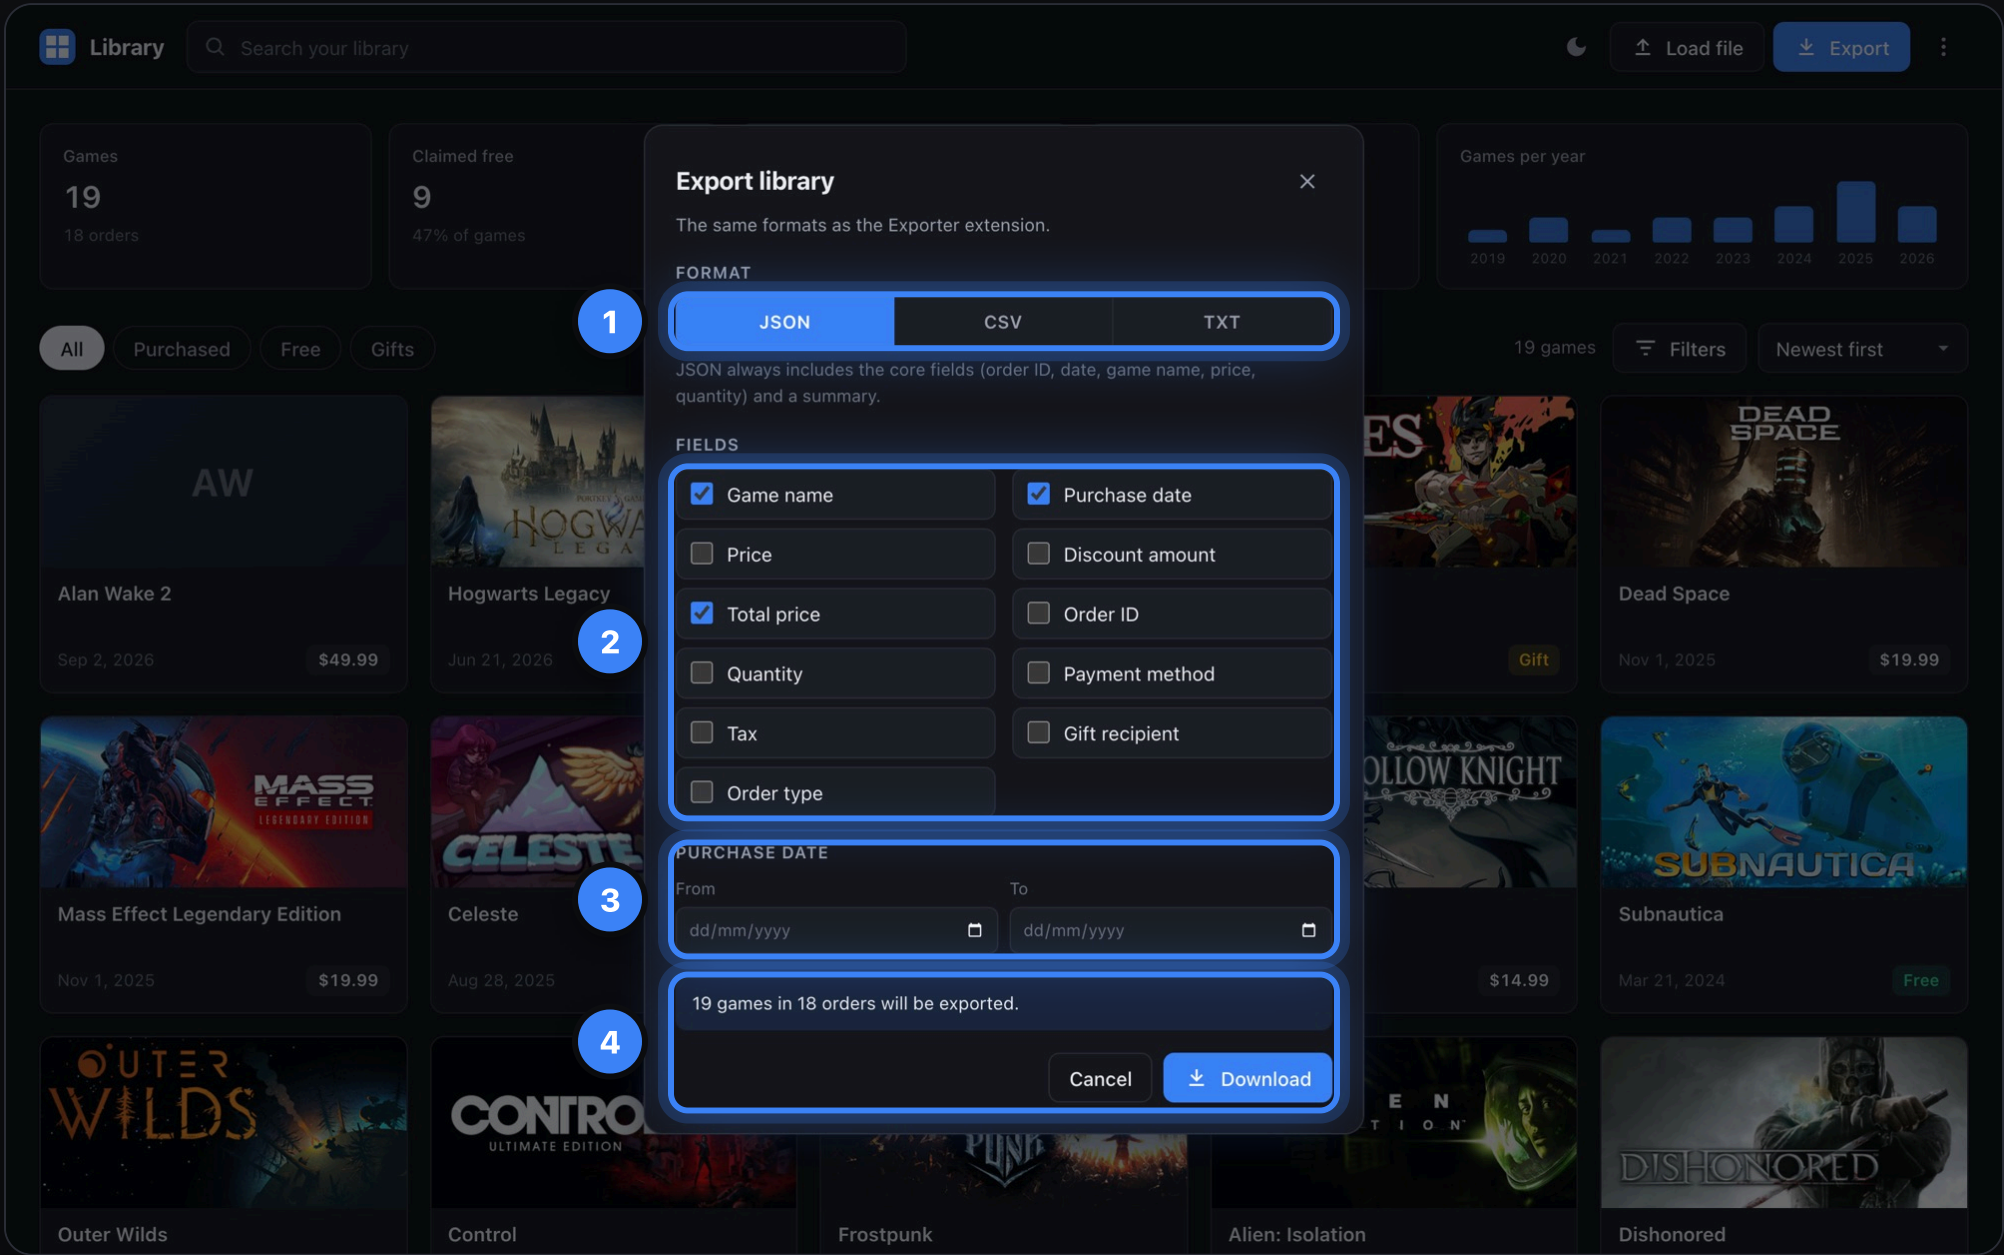

- 1

Format
JSON (structured, with a summary), CSV for Excel and Google Sheets, or plain text.
- 2

Fields
Pick what to include. Fields that aren't in your file are greyed out.
- 3

Purchase date
Export everything, or just a date range.
- 4

Download
Shows how many games will be exported. Your choices are remembered for next time.

Light or dark, desktop or phone

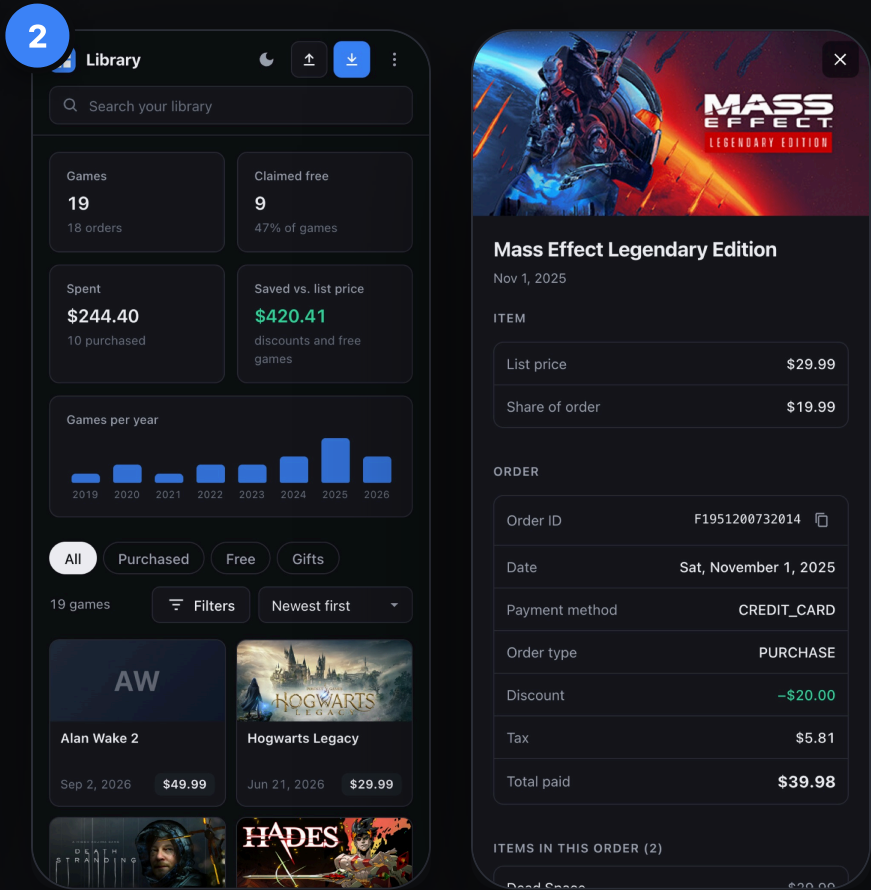

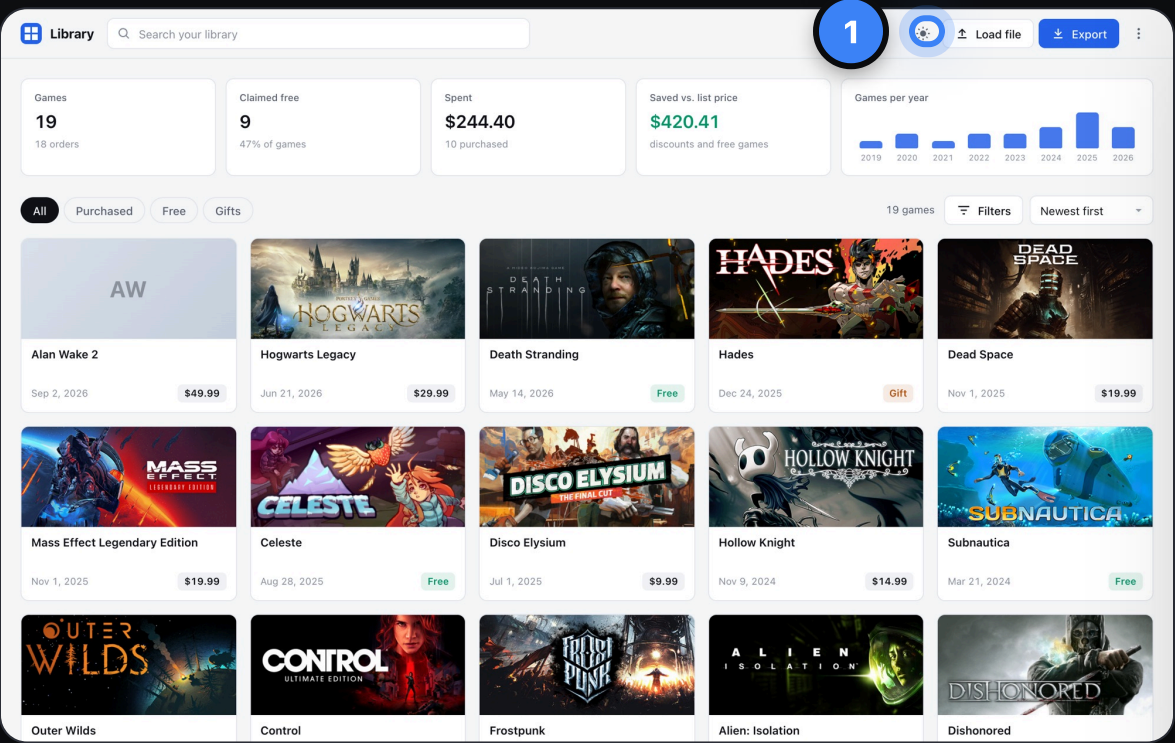

- 1

Theme

The theme button switches between Dark, Light and your system setting.
- 2

On your phone

Two cards per row, and game details open full screen.

Good to know

Answers to the most common questions.

Private by design

Your file is read in your browser and never uploaded. To find covers, only game names are looked up on Wikidata, and the images load from Steam.

Missing covers

Covers come from Steam. Games that aren't on Steam, such as some Epic exclusives, show their initials instead. You never get the wrong cover.

Your library stays put

It stays loaded while the tab is open, even if you reload or read the About pages. Closing the tab clears it, and so does Close library in the : menu.

"Already opened or expired"

A library sent from the extension can be opened once. If you see this message, export again from the extension, or load a file you saved.

Several currencies

If you bought games in more than one currency, totals are shown for each currency separately. They're never added together.
